The Woman at the Well

- by Bishop Robert Barron, 2023

At high noon, on a very hot day, Jesus meets a Samaritan woman by Jacob's well. To her enormous surprise, for Jews typically did not associate publicly with women or Samaritans, he asks her for a drink. When she balks, he calmly says, If you only knew what God is offering and who it is that is saying to you: give me a drink, you would have been the one to ask, and he would have given you living water. The woman comes day after day to this well, draws the water, consumes it, and then becomes thirsty again, prompting her to return once more. Jesus is offering her not just a single refreshing drink but something that will satisfy her thirst forever: the water that I shall give will turn into a spring inside him, welling up to eternal life.

The obsessive and repeated journey to the well is a symbol of what the spiritual tradition calls "concupiscent desire", which is to say the attempt to satisfy our longing for God through something less than God. When we seek to slake our infinite thirst for God with some worldly good- wealth, honor, pleasure, power- we are necessarily frustrated, and the pattern of our desire becomes addictive. Jesus offers the Samaritan woman grace, which is to say the divine life itself, and this will indeed become a spring bubbling up forever, for God's life is inexhaustible.

This is why, at the end of the story, the woman puts down her bucket, the instrument by which she had drawn water for many years. She could abandon her errant, frustrating, hopeless pattern of desire, for she had found grace, the water gushing up to eternal life.

Lord Jesus, you thirst to free us from our burdens.

You thirst for us to receive your love.

Open our hearts and fill them with living water.

Amen.

Hear, everyone who thirsts, come to the waters. - Isaiah 55:1
